The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance: The prior art 3.

of record and to the examiner's knowledge does not teach or render obvious, at least to the skilled artisan, the instant invention regarding a method of fabricating a microswitch, particularly characterized in claim 1 by the first subassembly having a first substrate with conducting lines and a control electrode, the substrate having regions of additional thickness and a second conducting layer, with each region of additional thickness being covered with a thickness of metal identical to that of the conducting lines.

The closest prior art of record is Seki (6,486,425 B2) which discloses the claimed 4.

invention except for the first subassembly containing a substrate with regions of additional thickness, each region of additional thickness being covered with a thickness of metal identical to that of the of conducting lines. Hays (U.S. 6,143,583) discloses a

MEMS device containing a substrate with regions of additional thickness covered by
